Female Business Leaders Join Forces on Foundation Board

WGF Announces 2008 Board of Directors

PITTSBURGH (January 31, 2008) – The Women and Girls Foundation (WGF) is kicking off an aggressive agenda for the New Year with a board of directors that includes some of the most powerful businesswomen in Pittsburgh. As WGF begins another year of leading programs and creating partnerships to work for equality in Southwest Pennsylvania, it is joined in its effort by six female business leaders representing the region's largest corporations and nonprofit organizations.

WGF's new and returning board members reflect the foundation's goal of creating equality for women by partnering with businesses in the region to enact change. In 2008, WGF will continue making grants to local organization to increase women's rights in our region and will focus the Foundation's advocacy efforts on decreasing the region's wage gap and increasing the number of women on the boards of Pittsburgh's publicly-owned companies.

"Our new board members reflect our goal of achieving economic justice for women in Pittsburgh," said Cecile Springer, WGF Board Chair. "We hope these new partnerships with the business community will be the start of positive change for women throughout our region."
